When a long course of class legislation, directed, not to the general welfare, but to the aggrandizement of the Northern section of the Union, culminated in a warfare on the domestic institutions of the Southern States-when the dogmas of a sectional party, substituted for the provisions of the constitutional compact, threatened to destroy the sovereign rights of the States. six of those States, withdrawing from the Union, ernment which would better secure the liberties for the preservation of which that Union was established. The courts have been open, the judicial functions fully executed, and every right of the peaceful citizen maintained as securely as if a war of invasion had not disturbed the land.

The people of the States now confedebecame convinced that the governrated ment of the United States had fallen into the hands of a sectional majority, who would pervert that most sacred of all trusts to the destruction of the rights which it was pledged to protect. They believed that to remain longer in the Union would subject them to a continuance of a disparaging dis-Mr. Tucker presented a petition from W. crimination, submission to which would be inconsistent with their welfare, and intolerable to a proud people. They therefore determined to sever its bonds and establish a new confederacy for themselves.

The experiment instituted by our Ravaln. tionary fathers, of a voluntary union of sovereign States for purposes specified in a solemn compact, had been perverted by those who, feeling power and forgetting right, were determined to respect no law but their own will. The government had ceased to answer the ends for which it was ordsined and established. To save ourselves from a revolution which, in its silen but rapid progress, was about to place us under the despotism of numbers, and to preserve in spirit, as well as in form, a system of government we believed to be eculiarly fitted to our condition, and full of promise for mankind, we determined to make a new association, composed of States homogeneous in interest, in policy and in feeling. True to our traditions of peace and love of justice, we sent commissioners to the United States to propose a fair and amis cable settlement of all questions of public debt or property which might be dispute. But the government at Washington, denying our right to self-government, refused even to listen to any proposals for a peaceful separation. Nothing was then left to us but to prepare for war. The first year in our history has been the most eventful in the annals of this continent. A new government has been established, and its machinery put in operation over an area exceeding seven hundred thousand square miles. The great principles upon which we have been willing to hazard everything that is dear to man have made conquests for us which sould never have been achieved by the sword. Our confederacy has grown from six to thirteen States, and hary!and already united to us by allowed memories and material interests, will, I believe, when able to speak with unstifled voice, connect her destiny with the South. Our people have rallied with unexampled unanimity to the support of the great principles of onstitutional government, with firm resolve to perpetuate by arms the rights which they could not peacefully secure. A million of men, it is estimated, are now standing in hostile array and waging war along a frontier of thousands of miles. Battles have been fought, sieges have been conducted, and, although the contest is not ended, and the tide for the moment is against us, the final result in our favor is not doubt-

The period is near at hand when our foes must sink under the immense load of debt which they have incurred, a debt which in their effort to subjugate us has already at-After wining, dining, bragging and blus- ject them to burthens which must continue to oppress them for generations to come.

Providence that we were to be taught the value of our liberties by the price which we pay for them.

The recollection of this great contest with all its common traditions of glory, of sacrifice and of blood, will be the bond of harmony and enduring affection among the producing unity in policy, fraternity in sentiment and joint effort in war.

Nor have the material sacrifices of the past year been made without some corresponding benefits. If the acquiescence of divert our industry from the production of articles of export, and employ it in supplying commodities for domestic use.

It is a satisfaction that we have main tained the war by our unaided exertions.

We have neither asked for nor received assistance from any quarter. Yet the interest involved is not wholly our own. The world at large is concerned in opening our markets to its commerce. When the independence of the Confederacy is recognized by the nations of the earth, and we are free to follow our interests and inclinations by cultivating foreign trade, the Southern States will offer to manufacturing nations the most favorable market which ever invited their commerce. Cotton, sugar, rice, tobacco, provisions, timber and naval stores will furnish attractive exchanges. Nor would the constancy of these supplies be likely to be disturbed by war. Our confederate strength will be too great to attempt aggression; and never was there a people whose interests and principles committed them so fully to a peaceful policy as those of the Confederate States. By the character of their productions they are too deeply interested in foreign commerce wantenly to disturb it. War of conquest they cannot wage, because the Constitution of their confederacy admits of no coerced association. Civil war there cannot be between States held together by their volition only. This rule of voluntary association, which cannot fail to be conservative, by se curing just and impartial government at home, does not diminish the security of the obligations by which the Confederate States may be bound to foreign nations. In proof on the basis of a common liability for the obligations of the General Government. Fellow-citizens, after the struggles of ages had consecrated the right of the Englishman to constitutional representative government, our Colonial ancestors were forced to vindicate that birthright by an appeal to arms. Success crowned their efforts, and they provided for their posterity a peaceful remedy against future ag

The tyranny of an unbridled majority, the most odious and least responsible form of despotism, has denied us both the right and the remedy. Therefore we are in arms to renew such sacrifices as our fathers made to the holy cause of constitutional liberty. At the darkest hour of our struggle the pro visional gives place to the permanent government. After a series of successes and victories, which covered our arms with glory. we have recently met with serious disasters. But in the heart of a people resolved to be free these disasters tend but to stimulate to increased resistance.

To show ourselves worthy of the inheritance bequeathed to us by the patriots of evolution, we must emulate that heroic devotion which made reverse to them but the crucible in which their parriotism was refined.

With confidence in the wisdom and virtue of those who will share with me the responsibility, and aid me in the conduct of public affairs; securely relying on the patriotism and courage of the people, of which the present war has furnished so many exemples, deeply feel the weight of the respond bilities I now, with unaffected diffidence, am about to assume; and, fully realizing the inadequacy of human power to guide and to sustain, my hope is reverently fixed on Him whose favor is ever vouchsafed to the cause which is just. With humble gratitude and adoration, acknowledging the Providence which has so visibly protected the Confederacy during its brief but eventful career, to Thee, Oh God, I trustingly commit myself, and prayerfully invoke Thy blessing on my country and its cause.

Before leaving, Harris made a speech recommending the citizens to burn their private property, and calling on Ten nesseeans to rally and meet him at Memphis, but no one paid any attention to him. It is thought he will not receive any considerable reinforcements.

Gen. Crittenden's command had joined Johnson at Murfreesboro. The railroad bridge at Nashville was destroyed by order of Floyd, against the urgent entreaties of the citizens, which caused much indignation FORTRESS MONROE, Feb. 27 .- A flag of truce to-day took over fifty people to Craney Island. We have the following Southern items: A meeting of cotton and tobacco planters took place at Richmond, on Wednesday evening, to take into consideration the voluntary destruction of the cotton and tobacco crops, in view of the fact that the efforts of the enemy were mainly directed towards robbing the South of the accumulation of these two staples. A number of speeches were made, and a committee was appointed to prepare business for an adjourned meeting this evening.

In Congress, on Wednesday, Senator Simms, of Kentucky, offered resolutions declaring that the people of the Confederate States will, to the last extremity, maintain and defend their right to self government and the Government established by them. To this end they will pledge their last man and their last dollar for the prosecution of the war until their independence is acrender was a terrible and unexpected knowledged, and also that they will submit to any sacrifice, and endure any trial, however severe, and firmly relying on the justice of their cause, and humbly trusting in the Providence of God, will maintain their position before the world and High Heaven while they have a voice to raise or an arm to defend. The resolutions were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

XXXVIIth Congress-First Session. Washington, Feb. 28 - Senate. - Mr

Starke, of Oregon, offered the following: Resolved, That the papers relating to the loyalty of Benjamin Starke, Senator from Oregon, be referred to the Judiciary Committee, with instructions to investigate the charges on the evidence which has been or

Mr. Hale objected to the resolution. Mr. Starke said that he presented the reselution himself, because he would spare any friend of his what might be an ungracious office. Certainly he would not permit any one opposed to him to place him-self in such a position. He (Starke) was anxious that any Senator who proposed to be the prosecutor of the charges brought here against him, should have an opportunity offered him. He availed himself of this opportunity to say that, relying on his own consciousness of loyalty to the country, and yielding to no man in devotion to the Constitution and Union, and in veneration and reverence for the flag of his country, he had hitherto refrained from entering into the question contained in these papers, prefering to stand on what he conceived to be his personal honor, and the rights of his State. If any one wished to prosecute the matter further, he would be most happy to meet it. The resolution of Mr. Starke was laid aside. The legislation appropriation bill was then taken up and passed. Mr. Starke's resolution was resumed. Mr. McDougall thought the question sattisfactorily settled, and moved to lay the resolution on the table. R-jected-yeas,

7: navs. 87. Mr. Dixon very much regretted the vote sibly avoid it. of the Senate yesterday. There was evidence against the Senator from Oregon which, as yet, was entirely uncontradicted. and which, if true, would show the disloyalty of the Senator. The Senator from Oregon was a native of Connecticut, and he had no marked feeling; but he thought the vote of yesterday opened the door anybody-traitor or not-and considered it itary significance whatever. the most disastrous vote that could have been given.

Mr. Browning said the Senator from Massachusetts seemed very much concerned about the other Senator's responsibility. It would be time enough to be anxious about B. when he asked his services. He felt no responsibility, and reflected on the vote he gave yesterday with as much satisfaction as any vote he ever gave. He thought the Senator had no right to lecture other Senaters and deplore their miserable condition. Mr. Fessenden also spoke in a similar strain. Mr. Sumner said the Senators from Illibeing an injurious imputation on them. In the canal. The day was nothing was further from his thoughts. He ever seen, clear and cool. knew the Senator from Illinois was amply able to take care of himself, and he had not the presumption to offer any assistance. He thought the remarks of the Senator from Maine not perfectly kind, or perfectly restrained from passion. He (Sumner) in day packet for Henderson, leaving at five r. s. tended nothing injurious to that Senstor. He had too great confidence in their kindly relations to make any suggestions which he could not interpret into kindness. He had said he was not astonished that the Senstors sought to relieve themselves of responsibility.

Mr. Fessenden asked what evidence there was that any man sought to relieve himself. Mr. Sumper said that certain Senators were anxious that an inquiry should take place.

Mr. Browning said he was in favor of O'N SATURDAY, MARCH 1-1 1862, COMMENCING further investigation, but not with any view to relieve himself of any responsibility.

Mr. Sumner said he referred to all the consequences of that vote. He thought Davis, Benjamin and Toombs could pass through the same door. The morning hour having expired the matter was laid over.

Mr. Clark offered a bill to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia as a substitute for the bill of the committee on the same subject.

Mr. Wilson, of Massachusetts, offered s resolution that the Secretary of the Treasury transmit to the Senate a copy of the 20 shares of Stock in Bank of Ashland, at Shelby-ville, $1,4% puld in; ald in; in Shelby County A. and M. Mr. Wade said he wished to make an explanation. He referred to a paragraph in the New York Tribune, relating to certain railroad legislation, and that certain words were put in the bill, giving the government power to take possession of railroads, &c. He said he introduced that bill, and it was true that the words complained of were not in the original bill, but he introduced that amendment in the Senate and explained it. The idea that anybody interpolated the words into the bill after after it passed the Senate, was an imputation on the Clerks, which is entirely groundless. If anybody was to blame, it was himself. Mr. Grimes said the Senator did not ex. plain the amendment. He was unwilling that it should go to the country; that he (Grimes) would not have voted for such a provision, if he had known what it was. The Senate adjourned till Monday.

House .- The House proceeded to the consideration of the special order, namely, the bill providing for receiving engineers into the volunteer service of the United States. After debate, the bill was rejected.

The Homestead bill was considered. An amendment was offered and rejected. prohibiting the engineers authorized by this act from being employed in the construction of any railroad not authorized by law. The bill was rejected, 57 to 66. The bill granting homesteads to actual settlers, and providing bounty for soldiers in lieu of lands, was taken up. Holman, Cravens and Winder discussed the merits of the question. The bill was amended so as to take effect January 1st, 1868, and passed,

Sr. Louis, Feb. 28 .- General Hallock, n general order, states that official infor nation has been received that the rebels are evacuating Mud Town, Ark., poisoned the provisions they were obliged to abandon, and that fortystwo officers and men were poisoned by eating the same. He says that we cannot retaliate by adopting the same barbarous mode of warfare, nor can we retaliate by punishing the innocent for the guilty. The laws of war forbid this, but the same code authorizes us to retaliate upon the guilty parties. Persons guilty of such acts, when capture', will not be treated as ordinary prisoners of war, nor will they be shot, but will suffer the ignominious death of being hung as felons. Officers are, in a measure, responsible for the acis of their troops. Officers of troops guilty of such acts, although not themselves the advisers or abettors of the orime, will, when captured, be put in irons and conveyed to headquarters. The laws of war make it their duty to prevent such barbarities. If they neglect that duty, they must suffer the consequences. WASHINGTON, Feb. 28 .- Special to Comrcial Advertiser .- The House Committee of Ways and Means will not be able to introduce the tax bills before Monday next They hope to have them matured before that
